

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN

CHATS OF THE FAIRIES.

Illustration by S. R. S.

What is there that in the office, store andilling business is more useful, pleasant, even than the home and work we submit above.

And many reasons to induce wives to prefer the comfortable home,

The final result of our mother's pack day.

The numerous restlessness give way.

"I am not always here a trifle less strong."

of fatigued women passing away—

Many wife and widow entered in the swelling race.

Such-minded wives will pull no their own.

How women clearly to advance their cause.

But by their action, their descendants will—

For every three working women, there are nine more.

Exercise for Women.

A famous physician of late has been coming pointing out to women the importance of physical exercise as a means of resting the mind. He says emphatically that the old theory of idleness— that the mind cannot rest when the body is tired. He says that the practice of taking a long walk or a fast trot when one has done a hard day's work, is entirely the wrong thing to do. In the words "It adds one fatigue to another." He does not believe in strenuous exercise for normally overworked people.

Another belief of his will cause more excitement and discussion than any other. "Women," he says, "who do not indulge in physical exercise live longer than men." He does not think women need exercise. This is a daring statement to make in the middle of a generation that is absolutely given over to the exercise that. He is not alone in the belief however. For a number of women who have gone to rest and then through vigorous exercise agree with the theorist. The many women have become useless burdens through over-exercising; for the argument is to be exercised women. The theorist that exercises gives grace to a woman has been discarded, but there is quite a good deal of support given in their numbers to the new theory that heavy exercise unfit a woman for living her life.

The doctor says, not plenty of rest air out and night and one hour's walk is enough for any woman. Regarding the subject of the annual vacation for women he declares— "One out of ten women fed while after a vacation that when they started out are unable to resume work properly. A woman does not need a long rest, but a great number of short ones. It is better to rest four separate half hours a day than to go the round through the week and rest sixteen hours at Sunday. It is better to divide the weeks months of work into short and holidays rather than take two months after six months of exhaustion."

However cannot grow any smaller. All the finer come are discernible, glistening wings are larger than ever, long blue characterize every garment.

The big pillow stuff supersedes all others.

In late proper elastic will be the most popular.

For years has permed hair been so prominent.

The opaque dressed head of others in popularity.

The next outline of address is likely to grow larger.

Stuffed piping with ornate and sealing decorations.

Only the simplest of garments are allowed with long skirts.

Very little fur coats are to be ideal wear for young girls.

New silks are generally plain, while others are highly ornate.

Green silk is used in big bows at the neck or some place on the hat.

There is no mention of the rage for large color and ornate shades.

The blouse knot is now much in vogue and goes well with the new turban.

The wraps for evening wear are cut three-quarter like the old-fashioned skirt.

Silks are to be no longer, but are likely to see a new outline on the train.

The coats that belong to dressy girls or those worn with short gowns are very long.

When is a Woman old?

A Chicago young woman said she drew the line against women over 40 years of age, in the theory that a woman past 40 is no longer to be classed as young. Naturally there is a certain process, and many of the members intended to resign. Of course there is no disgrace in old age—either honor or it. She is one of the very few things we which we have no control over, and she which we are neither to command nor credit. Old age is honorable because it is the result of our right living. The various exercises and the aching never attain it.

It is my right living, by obedient observance of the laws of nature that we not only live as old as we can, but younger than we really are. It is just as much a matter of pride for one to look and feel like a 20 or 30 as for another to be like an 80. Though there is no degree in growing old, there is denied inconveniences in it, economically, physically and socially. The woman who seems 40 naturally need not like to be classified and associated with women who feel 60. If one is bright and young in spirit the woman continues to be as regarded by bright and young people. Beauty really has very little part in it. The woman's happiness and her sympathetic relationship with the young and vigorous depend on it. She has a right to demand that she be taken as the age indicates and shows.

A designer has brought out a new line in the way of umbrellas.

It is extremely light and compact and instead of having a box just turn the side it is opened open, finished with a two-inch hem at the edge, and is then bent from side to side through a covered system. Silk or velvet ribbon is used.

The morning is the best time for a cold-water bath, a cold one morning or night, but a hot-water bath should be taken just before retiring, immediately it is retiring. Never bathe just after a hearty meal. Bathe regularly every day.

The Best Books.

According to a new oracle, human beings are divided into two distinct categories, the free individual and the collective type. The free individual bears the imprint of absolute value;

"Have you got an independent fortune?" "No, I'm married."—Cleveland Leader.

Mr. Knicker—Where do you keep your auto? Mrs. Knicker—In storage, of course.—New York Sun.

Jimmie—My auto gone downtown to pay some bills. Tommies—Poor! The man comes to the house to collect ours!

He—She is such a charmingly innocent girl, isn't she? She—Oh, yes; we are much pains to acquire it.—The Star.

Knicker—You know that speech is given to man to conceal his thoughts broken—Well, penmanship does it even better.—New York Sun.

She put the phone—I presume you are a true lover of music, are you not? He—Yes, I am but pray don't stop playing on my account.

John, you yawned twice while we were calling on that lady." "Well, dear, you did not expect me to keep my mouth closed all the time, did you?"

Magnolia—If I remember rightly this is not your first appearance in court. Priscilla—No, your honor, but I hope you don't judge by appearance."

"I've just figured out how the Venus de Milo came to lose her breast." "How?" "She took them off trying to button her shirt when up the back!" —Puck.

Watty Walker—I see 300 more men has been thrown out of work. Third Treasurer—She! There's going to be too much competition in our business—Puck.

"The seventeen mothers in the eligible mothers' club agreed to decide by lottery which had the handsomest baby." "Well, who won it?" "Each had got one vote."

"Are marriages made in heaven?" "As to that I can't say, but I do know this much." "What is that Peleg?" "There lots of courting done in church."—Washington Herald.

"This watch will last you for a lifetime," remarked the jeweler. "Nonsense," retorted the customer. "Can't I see for myself now that its hours are numbered?"—London Spectator.

Am I to buy at roadside?—What time is it? Boy—Everywhere 12 o'clock. Man—Thought it was more than 12. Boy—Nope. Never gets more than 12 in the country. Begins at 1 again.—Dingo.

Prystander—Doctor, what do you think of this small injury? Doctor of local extraction—Two of them are undoubtedly bad, but as for the rest of them, time alone can tell.—Boston Transcript.

"You have a new housemaid. I see, Mrs. Longfellow." "Yes, I got her about a week ago." "How do you like her?" "Very much indeed. She lets me do almost as I like about the house."—London Tribune.

"What diamonds did the doctor make of your wife's illness?" "Said she is suffering from overwork." "Is that so?" "Yes, he looked at her tongue and reached that decision immediately."—Detroit Free Press.

Mr. Bowditch—You never call me names now unless you want something before marriage it was different. Mrs. Bowditch—Oh, no. Before marriage I called you pet names because I wanted you.—London Gentlewoman.

"Imagine your feet dirty again this morning," exclaimed the teacher. "What would you say if I came to school every day with a dirty face?" "Hush," grunted Jimmie. "It's too polite to say anything!"—Critic.

Mother (in a very low voice)—Tommy, your grandfather is very ill. Don't say anything nice to cheer him up a bit. Tommy (in an earnest voice)—Grandfather, wouldn't you like to have soldiers in your funeral?"—London Tribune.

"You have a new housemaid. I see, Mrs. Longfellow." "Yes, I got her about a week ago." "How do you like her?" "Very much indeed. She lets me do almost as I like about the house."—London Tribune.

"I am sure," said the reverend, "the public would be interested to know the secret of your success." "Well, young man," replied the captain of industry, "the secret of my success has been my ability to keep it a secret."—Atlantic Standard & Times.

"I'm afraid the existing cold," said Mrs. Chapman, trying to get some medical advice from her. "Every once in a while I feel an itching in my nose, and then sneeze. What would you do in a case like that, doctor?" "Well," replied Dr. Sharpe, "I guess I'd sneeze too."

The mother of a conscientious little girl, wishing to rid her of the fear of some one in a field through which she had to pass, told her to go right in and pretend she didn't see them. "But mamma," protested the small maid, "wouldn't that be deceiving the truth?"—Puck.

"How did those two ever come to marry each other?" "Well, she was the only woman he ever knew who would listen to his theories one fine morning at a time, and he was the only man she ever knew that could sing at her bidding without getting nervous."—Puck.

A physiologist came upon a hard-working Irishman riding his bicycle, in the street. "Don't you know," said the physiologist, "that it is work in the sun without a hat is bad for your health?" "I suppose," said the Irishman, "that God is on the job if it is not any brains."

"How did those two ever come to marry each other?" "Well, she was the only woman he ever knew who would listen to his theories one fine morning at a time, and he was the only man she ever knew that could sing at her bidding without getting nervous."—Puck.

"I am one of the important ladies," she replied, with becoming dignity. "Where are you going?"

"I am one of Tamms & Co.'s dependency for marriage gentlemen," he informed the Philadelphia Ledger.

We have noticed that if you think before you speak, the other fellow goes in the hole first.

To the general public the word bronco suggests everything wild and vicious in horse flesh, the associate the unbroken or the bronco animal entirely with the rugged West. Thus the why little animal could ever develop the points of a good part horse would be received with much reservation by most persons.

On some ten years or more of cross-breeding, says County Lee in America, he accomplished the somewhat amazing result. Today one can set on the gentle parts of Central flat the well-grown bronco trotting at an equal with the fine-grained thoroughbred and the number is a rapidly growing.

To be sure, he is no longer the lumberhead with a pronounced eye-meat, almost as devoid of feed as a skeleton.

He has developed a fine crest in the breeding and can show at this a neck as my Kentucky stallion.

The middle piece is no longer dimpled from much eating of grass, but nor is he so loosely joined to his quarters as in his prototype. Higher living has rounded him into a strikingly well-proportioned saddle horse. In his new estate he subsists less on the fresh, juicy grasses, and the new order grows out a different animal.
